Two days workshop on "Interactive Webpages with PHP and MySQL" for III year BCA & BSc students was organized by department of Computer Science on 21st and 22nd March 2025 in Seminar Hall of our college.

An interactive web page is one that allows users to engage with the content and perform actions, such as submitting forms, browsing dynamic data, or interacting with a database. PHP (Hypertext Pre-processor) and MySQL are two widely used technologies that enable developers to build dynamic, data-driven websites. This report discusses the core concepts and skills learned during a workshop on creating interactive web pages with PHP and MySQL.

Workshop Content:

Setting up the Environment

Basic PHP Syntax

MySQL Database Integration

Building Interactive Features

- i) Forms and User Input
- ii) Dynamic Content Generation
- iii) User Authentication and Error Handling and Validation
- iv) Search and Filtering

The workshop on creating interactive web pages with PHP and MySQL provided participants with the foundational knowledge and practical experience required to develop dynamic, data-driven websites. From understanding how to set up a development environment to interacting with databases and creating user authentication systems, participants were equipped with essential skills to build interactive web applications. These technologies remain a cornerstone of web development, and mastering them opens up numerous opportunities for creating functional, interactive, and scalable websites.
